Abstract: This article provides information about the poetry of Alexander Feinberg, a talented artist of the Uzbek and Russian people. Also, his poems are analyzed linguistically.

Key words: poetry, human psyche, symbolic images, poetic arts, national traditions, poetic styles.

Today, Alexander Feinberg's name and works are sought after and loved by readers. The life and work of the poet, who occupies the same place in the hearts of young and old, is always alive. The poet's lyrics are incomparable because they are decorated with beautiful masterpieces of poetry. Feinberg's poems are able to combine the traditions of Eastern literature and European poetic styles at the same time. In the poems, natural scenes are depicted in bright colors, human feelings, justice, kindness, love for the Motherland, the value of time, the environment, hills, endless fields, lines of the animal world, in a word. so to speak, from the simple life of sincere people to the most elegant points of Uzbek national traditions. In his poems, the poet effectively used poetic arts such as revitalization, simile, simile, metaphor, contrast. Over the years, the poet's poems have been translated into English, French, and Spanish.

The theme and idea of the poem

Alexander Feinberg's poem "Sheet" is written about the creative heritage, the suffering of the poet's heart and the eternal values of poetry. In the poem, the poet calls his lines his heart and soul and wants to leave them as a treasure for future generations. The main theme of the poem is the place of creativity in the human psyche and its priceless inheritance for generations. The poet describes the poem not only as written words, but also as a collection of personal feelings, emotions and experiences.

Images and symbols used in the poem:

"The sky protects the stars,

The deep sea holds secrets"

The sky and stars represent infinity and inspiration. And the sea is a mysterious and infinite world, a symbol of the human heart.

"A page torn from a notebook

Save my poems quickly"

This page is not a simple piece of paper, but a piece of the poet's creativity and soul.

The essence of poetry

The author shows poetry as a high value that should not only be read and understood, but also felt:

"Poetry is not only reading, listening,

Poetry is a sound in the heart"

In these lines, poetry is embodied as the inner world of a person, a sound in the heart.

The poet compares poetry to a guiding force for a person, a saving force in the complex paths of life:

"Trailing in the Taiga as if saved

A reed in the lakes as if swaying"

Harmony of poetry and nature

The author harmonizes his lines with nature:

"Every line is my soul, every poem is my heart,

Hash to the forest, birds, clouds"

These verses reflect the unity of creation and nature. The poet makes his poems an integral part of nature. It would not be wrong to say that Feinberg's ability to create a beautiful poem through such simple, small things is due to his innate ability. Feinberg is an international poet who embodies the ability of Russian poets Sergey Yesenin and Uzbek Usman Nasir to express universal meaning in short words.

In the final part of the poem, the author addresses future generations:

"May it not come to generations,

Don't let my poems be sad"

Here, the poet wants his poems to be a source of encouragement, inspiration and joy for the future generation. They wish to be pure and unblemished like the wind, the sea, and the leaves:

"Wind, sea and leaf are examples

Let him breathe, let him laugh flawlessly."

Poetic arts The poem is artistically rich and melodious. The following artistic tools were used:

1. Allegory: "Trail in the taiga", "reed in hands as if swinging".
2. Metaphor: "Every line is my soul, every poem is my heart."
3. Parallelism: Similarity in the lines gives the poem its own rhythm.
4. Symbolic images: stars, sea, wind, leaf - represent the free and natural nature of poetry.

Conclusion. Alexander Feinberg's poem "Sheet" is a work that expresses the creative heritage, deep experiences of the human heart, and the eternity of poetry with a high artistic image. The poet presents his poems as a sound in the heart and a sacred treasure to be left for future generations. The natural and pure images of the poem make the reader think deeply and feel the eternity of creativity.

This poem not only expresses the author's pain, but also serves as a source of inspiration and spiritual freedom for the reader.
